SC Whitmore School, by far my favorite place I've ever taught, and I've taught at a massive variety of public schools. For the most part, what I hear from parents is safety. The fact that they know where their student is going to school, is in their home and so the fact that they feel safe sending their students to our school. They do feel supported, they feel like they have my phone number, they can get in touch with me at any time, and I think they also know that we have a very strong curriculum, and so we're preparing students for what's next. The beauty of the word success is that we get to define it differently. So success for some of my students is getting that diploma and going straight to work, for some of my students that means getting the diploma and being prepared for college and we have a very good preparation rate for success for our first-year freshman in college, and so it just depends on what the goal is for the student and that's what I'm here to cater to. What is it that you're wanting for your goals and how can I help you reach those?
